YSS Fixed-type sudare tapestry

TX Texture

Folklore art-style sudare "YUURI" is a series made up of simple screens, made by hand using cattail and bamboo by artisans. Smoked bamboo and cattail have been used for exterior sudare screens since ancient times.

- * Used outdoors, natural materials tend to mold and discolor. The materials are to be enjoyed with such effects adding extra character. The metal parts may also rust.
- * The level of wear and tear on the texture that are for both indoors and outdoors depends on the environments they are used in.
- * The texture stretch and shrink with temperatures, humidity and weather.

Bamboo comes from the family of rice. It is a perennial plant that has received much attention lately for its eco-friendliness, and its vitality and resilience as a material are almost mythical. Because of its joints bamboo tends to be uneven in color, some bamboo even being curved, all of which are characteristics of natural materials. Bamboo sudare are delicately woven screens, made by threading together finely split bamboo strands vertically, rung by rung. Meanwhile, handmade sudare screens made with thin natural ramin panels are graceful and simple, oozing the wood's original warmth, woven together vertically with threads. Bamboo and wood are both perfect materials to create a simple and relaxing space, an atmosphere that is unique to natural materials.

*Sudare stretches and shrinks with temperatures, humidity, weather, and with the years. It may also discolor with direct sunlight.
